

JULY

inspiration
guide

Your Classroom as a Compass: Planning for Environments that Children Navigate with Confidence

A well-designed classroom sets the stage so that children know where to go, what to do, and how to belong. Read our new blog to explore how intentional environments support independence, reduce confusion, and guide educators and children through the rhythms of the day.

Fire-less Fireworks!

Make predictions, explore cause and effect, and experiment with color mixing with this colorful science activity for preschoolers.

Ready, Set, Explore! Tips for Introducing Classroom Materials with Intention

This infographic for early educators offers a step-by-step approach to launching new materials in the classroom.

Summertime Space & Systems Review

Download this Leadership Tool for Early Childhood Program Alignment

Becker's Classroom Visual Resources

Browse our selection of downloadable templates for your classroom, including daily schedules, classroom expectations, morning greetings, and more!

A Purposeful Pause: Summer as a Season of Alignment

Becker's new blog invites program leaders to use the slower rhythm of summer, whether brief or ongoing, as a chance to pause, realign, and lead with intention. Reflection prompts, collaborative strategies, and practical tools offer a grounded path for strengthening what works and thoughtfully shifting what doesn't.

BECKER'S